Day 1

Morning meet the guide at hotel, have a one day tour to The Capital Museum, Qian Men Dashilan & Liulichang Antiques Street.

The Capital Museum has an area of 24,800 square meters with five floors above ground and two floors underground; its floor area has now reached 63,390 square meters. Collecting, exhibiting cultural relics, and undertaking related research are the three main tasks of the Capital Museum. It has fully adopted internationally advanced technology in its construction and ranks among the best in China. With its imposing building, abundant exhibitions, high technology and advanced services, it has placed itself in the world a leading position. Cultural relics unearthed in Beijing are its main items on display, which bear forceful Beijing features.

Qian Men Dashilan

The portal of outer city, starting from Yong Ding Men was built in the 43rd years of the Ming Dynasty (1564). In old Beijing Qianmen was the hub of commerce, entertainment and vice. Qianmen is named for the gate separating the inner "Manchu" city in 1648. Some of China's oldest businesses are located here, including Tongrentang, a traditional Chinese pharmacy opened in 1669, and Ruifuxiang Silk Store.

Liulichang Antiques Street (Liulichang Wen Hua Jie)

Liulichang is a famous district in downtown Beijing that is known for a series of traditional Chinese stone dwellings housing that sells various craftwork, artistry and antiques. An antique market that resembles a Chinese village has many shops that are filled with a variety of Chinese folk arts such as painting, calligraphy, pottery, carpets, vases, books, scrolls and chopsticks.
